I grew up with these and spent many evenings drawing and watching movies from that time. I'm glad to see I'm not the only one who loves the 90s... ~~~ drewcrawford Absolutely! I grew up in the 90s and I love the era too. I also like to figure out where all the people in my life came from and when, what the influences on them were (talent scout, school, etc.) and how they compare with some celebrities from the 90s. ~~~ Islunsuex I'm about a decade late to the party, so all this nostalgia talk might make me feel old... But it's getting harder and harder to not think of the internet era as being more real than the 90s. My friends I grew up with all came of age with the internet - and to a lesser extent, the internet was a trend when we were young. Facebook grew from being a profile website to a way of keeping in touch and making sense of the world, myspace went from being a TV/movie profile website to a hub for music listening and places to get to know a niche community. I look at my parents and my grandparents and it's almost uncanny. My dad and his friends grew up at the times of communism, and were kids when the Berlin Wall was built. Same for my grandparents - the 90s were the nadir of their careers, but they already had kids by the time of the end of communism in Eastern Europe. We are all relics. ----- drewcrawford This is one
