Firmware Download and Support. Which wireless chargers are best? You're viewing the hottest gadgets All the new wireless charging pads are covered in this handy guide, but which is best? Which is good for charging in bed? Who has wireless charging in their mattress? There are plenty of choices to choose from - the Samsung, Sony, Bowers & Wilkins and iHome are best for the bedside, but which is best overall? The CurrentLife is the best for the bedside and iHome is a great choice, but the Belkin and Satechi are great picks too. If you're looking for more charging options, the FireFly goes above and beyond - it even floats in water. The Best Wireless Charging Pads Samsung Level 2 Charging pad - $89 It looks like an ordinary old incandescent lightbulb, but instead of emitting light, the Level 2 charging pad emits radio waves. With it you can charge an iPhone 6 at up to 3.4W, an iPad at up to 1.6W, an LG G3 at up to 3.4W, and an LG G4 at up to 1.2W. The pad's magnetic charging cradle is part of the charging pad, so the whole thing can be used as an extension cord if you take it to the bedroom and want to charge an iPad. It also includes three size settings – small, medium, and large – to help you achieve the perfect charging position. It does have a minor downside – it takes about one week to arrive, but if you're quick it can make up for that. Goodbye, Incandescent Lightbulbs:
